X-OP - is a gradually growing network of artists, researchers, operators, produces and centers with the aim to establish an European platform for creation of art and exchange. With its places, spaces and user accustomed technological infrastructure it fosters mobility of artists, theoreticians and producers. It is built to strengthen the pan-European collaboration, common production and interdisciplinary approach to art.

Therefore the artistic realisation will be outlined by various segments of creators, from practical to theoretical, each of them contouring his/her professional skills and preferences. So the production will result in a complex artistic procedure to build the art-work that will consider all aspects of approaches and will consist of all necessary elements and needed parts and facts to be ready for touring around and showing in all possible spaces.

The present-day digital era created the technical preconditions for the conception, editing, archiving and the output of hitherto separate areas of artistic production on the basis of a common code. Artistic goals are always positioned at the limits of available technologies. The boundaries of the possible have grown significantly wider, placing the longing for the Gesamtkunstwerk, the total work of art, into focus again. On the other hand, the perils of arbitrariness are lurking, of linking of everything with everything else, of the "white noise", the senselessness of the information overflow. But also new ways of discourse, of work and interaction, already announced years ago by the media enthusiasts, appear at the horizon. Crossover art forms are emerging.
